CARING FOR YOUR APARTMENT - You (and your apartment-mate(s) when applicable) are responsible for the standard of cleanliness in your apartment. It is all about making a joint effort with all roommates to respect the shared spaces and leave them tidy. Learn these few simple maintenance tasks that can help keep things from piling up:

• It is important to set boundaries between you and your roommate(s) at the beginning about how to keep your home nice and tidy. Having an honest conversation about how to disagree or hold each other accountable is very important.

• Determine what the household chores are and agree on a cleaning schedule for the common areas of the apartment.
Be sure to evenly distribute these tasks as conflicts may occur otherwise.

• Scrubbing the shower and toilet can be a simple task if you add this to your apartment cleaning plan. Also, these chores are much easier if you split them with your roommates.

• Make a habit of cleaning up as you go! Washing dishes as you cook works great and prevents a large pile to wash after the meal. Make sure the kitchen is clean before bedtime to prevent an unmanageable mess and to help control ants and other pests.

• Empty your wastebasket often to avoid it from smelling and attracting unwanted pests. Compost everything you can instead of throwing it in the trash.

• Clear the floors of any clutter. Take a few minutes to put away any books, games, or other items that are not where they belong. With this last step, your home should be in good shape for the day.
